The school meal programs aim to provide nutritious meals to children during the school day. Children may receive breakfast and lunch at no cost if they are categorically eligible for free meals or if they qualify for free meals based on Federal poverty guidelines. Children who do not qualify for free meals may purchase meals at a subsidized cost, at either the reduced price or paid rate. Sometimes, however, children who do not qualify for free meals would like a breakfast or lunch, but do not have money in their account or in hand to cover the cost of the meal at the time of the meal service.

The United States Department of Agriculture's (USDA) Food and Nutrition Service (FNS) recognizes that unpaid meal charges represent a difficult and complex issue directly impacting the schools participating in the school meal programs and the children they serve. FNS has made a concerted effort to learn from and build on the success of school nutrition directors, principals, and food service professionals with direct experience in managing unpaid meal charges.

The first edition of Overcoming the Unpaid Meal Challenge: Proven Strategies from Our Nation's Schools summarizes the best practices FNS has collected. The guide shares positive approaches local program operators can use in their efforts to:

- Reach all eligible children;
- Assist families with the school meal application process;
- Make payment convenient;
- Send payment reminders;
- Get buy-in for a local meal charge policy;
- Provide alternate meals, when necessary; and
- Find alternative funding sources.

The guide is designed to support State and local stakeholders working every day to address the challenge of unpaid meal charges. Throughout the guide, readers will hear from school superintendents, principals, food service professionals, and others who shared their own challenges and successes addressing unpaid meal charges during the comment period on unpaid meal charges and during two public webinars FNS hosted on the topic in February 2016.

The guide will be updated as needed to reflect changes to policy, additional best practices, and to incorporate clarifications requested by State agencies and FNS Regional Offices.
